DUE DILIGENCE

Investigation of a business or person prior to signing a contract, or an act with a certain standard of care. It can be a legal obligation, but the term will more commonly apply to voluntary investigations.

A common example of due diligence in various industries is the process through which a potential acquirer evaluates a target company or its assets for an acquisition. The theory behind due diligence holds that performing this type of investigation contributes significantly to informed decision making by enhancing the amount and quality of information available to decision makers and by ensuring that this information is systematically used to deliberate in a reflexive manner on the decision at hand and all its costs, benefits, and risks.

At LATS, our qualified professionals provides an effective due diligence service to our clients so that they can take an informed decision, with maximum risks on the table. Through this we have helped our clients to strengthen their bargaining position and negotiate the deal in the most transparent and favorable terms.

We conduct projects based on recurring and one-off basis. Our project methodology briefly consist of the following phases, from its inception until the end, depending upon our agreed terms and conditions with our client. We always try to exceed our client's expectations by providing something extra; so that our long-term relationship can be ensured.

Our Project Phases Generally Includes:

Phase One: Initial Kick Off Meeting

We identify the situation or problem, on which the client needs help. We initiate a discussion on expectations the client has from us, and the roles each will play throughout the consulting process. We officially signs the contract along with the scope of services to be provided.

Phase Two: Clarifying Objectives, Scope and Contracting

During this phase, we helps the client identify desired specific outcomes. We discuss what type of product the client expects them to produce. We officially signs the contract along with the scope of services to be provided.

Phase Three: Data Collection

In this phase, we begin collecting data on the main issues the client has presented. Different methods can be used to obtain data, such as interviews or questionnaires, observation, or analysis of existing documents or records.

Phase Four: Providing Feedback

We present our findings to the client, give recommendations and provide the client with time to respond.

Phase Five: Implementation

If the client requires assistance, we can help implement changes he recommended in the feedback session.
